Key features of a typical bait boat include:

Remote Control: Bait boats are equipped with remote control systems that allow anglers to navigate the boat, control the release of bait, and sometimes even monitor underwater conditions using built-in cameras or fishfinders.

Bait Compartments: These boats have compartments or hoppers designed to hold and release fishing bait, typically in the form of pellets or boilies, at the desired location.

GPS and Sonar: Some advanced bait boats come with GPS capabilities to accurately position the boat and sonar technology to help anglers locate fish and bait effectively.

Range and Battery Life: The range and battery life of bait boats vary depending on the model. Some can cover significant distances, ensuring that bait is placed precisely where it's needed.

Safety Features: Many modern bait boats are designed with safety features like low-battery warnings and return-to-home functions to prevent the boat from getting lost on the water.
